

Pat Meyers

Pat Meyers began painting in Massachusetts as a teenager. With little support or encouragement by her art teacher, Pat set the paintbrush aside until her children, Jeff and Traci, were grown.

Thirty years later, she enrolled in acrylic lessons with D.D. Watson in the Atlanta area where she continued to refresh and learn technique. Fortunately, her talent was well recognized and her desire to paint was ignited once again.

In 2005 Pat and her husband, Brad, moved to McCormick County, South Carolina where she discovered the MACK (McCormick Arts Council at the Keturah) and took watercolor classes with Bill Updegraff. Shortly thereafter, she began acrylic and sketching classes there with Clint Scott. She has continued these classes to the present.

Pat enjoys challenging subject matter, from portraits and animals to landscapes that "speak to her," so she can learn and grow from the experience. In her art, Pat hopes her work evokes emotion and memories while leaving a lasting, reflective state of heart and mind. In her country home, Pat now lets the paint, brush, and pencil reveal her many creative talents.

She now inspires other artists as an instructor at the MACK, even as she continues to grow in her art.
